Ideas for check-in/check-out

Breaking Bread Together

Gathering over a meal is one of the most ancient forms of community process, as people sharing food appreciate each other at a profound level. Nourished bodies and relationships pave the way for better collaboration and higher quality work.

Celebrate

With joy and zest, publicly celebrate milestones and recurring events. Affirming shared history, we nourish community, crystallize a sense of accomplishment, and build group identity by unifying our stories and common goals. Can be planned and ritualized, or as spontaneous as a group cheer.

Challenge

Challenging something—accepted wisdom, ideas, information, practices, or ways of looking at things—provokes learning and new thinking, surmounts complacency and blind spots, and engenders creativity. It also invites us to reexamine our uncritical acceptance of convention and the status quo.

Circle

A Circle is a safe, solid, yet permeable space with an inside, an outside, and a focus that moves from person to person. A welcoming form where everyone can see each other and all voices are heard, it creates a field that invites sharing and story.

Learning Community

Week 1 | Cultivating Community and Exploring Leadership

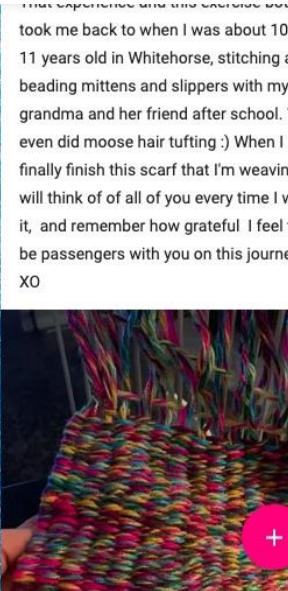

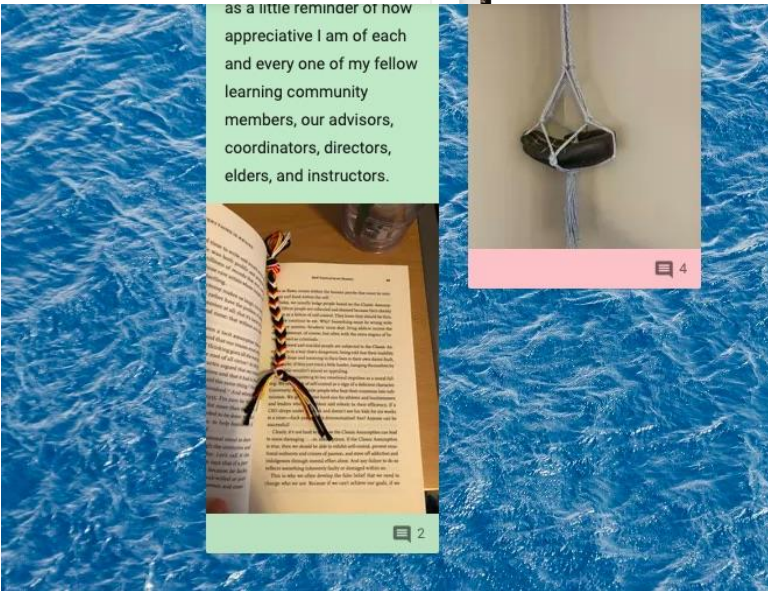

Week 2 | Critically Exploring Leadership Contexts and Worldviews

Week 3 | Orienting and Defining Leadership

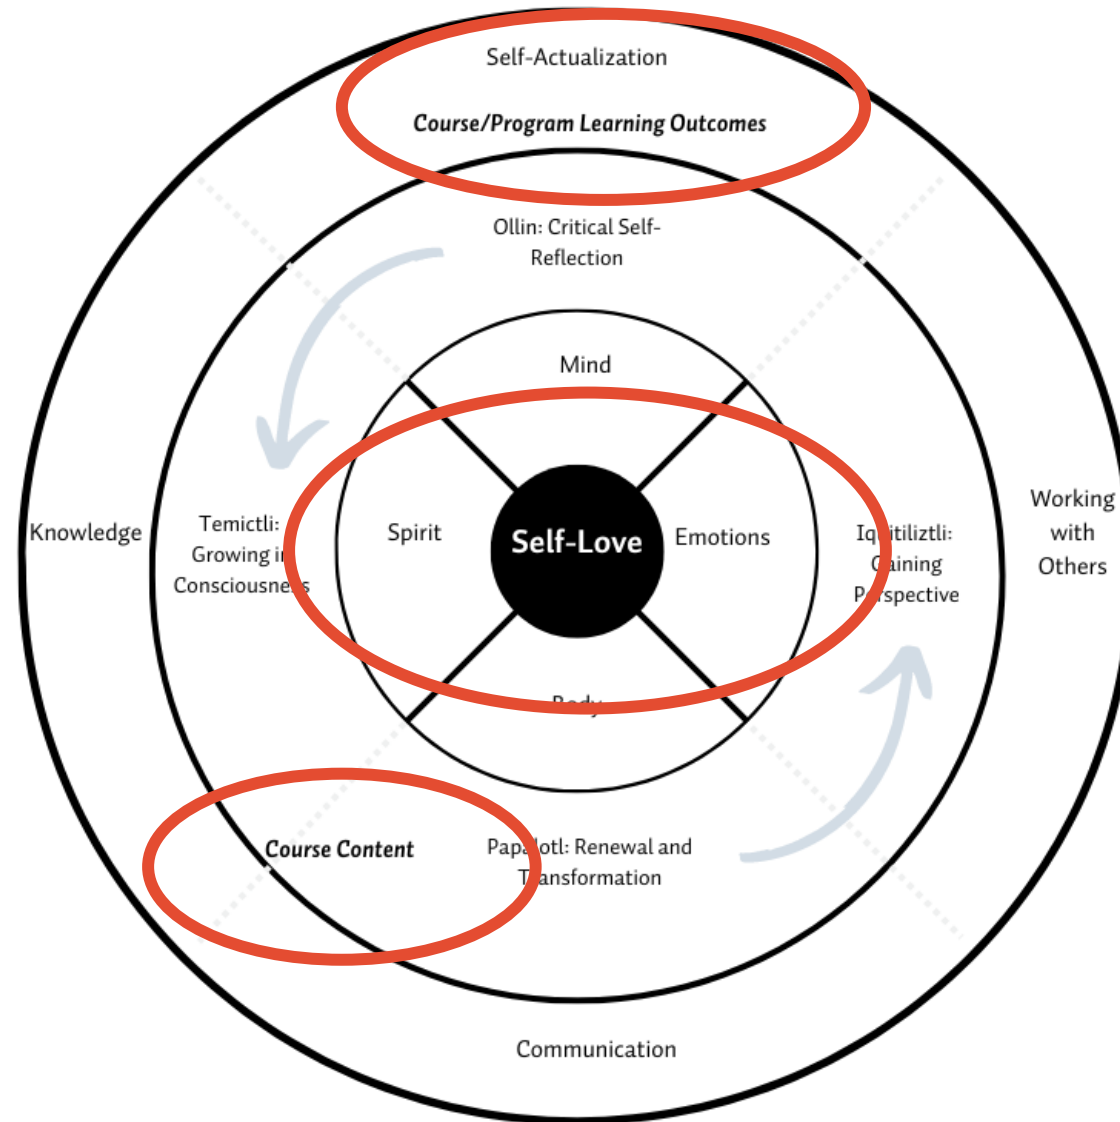

Week 4 | Earlier Content

"Leadership emerges between people. It arises from a need, an opportunity, a situation. But if we are so whetted to a particular leadership identity, we can often miss these moments" (Evans, 2017)

This embroidery represents growth, opportunity, and vision, which are all aspects of our leadership journey that emerge in the moments described above. I love the idea of riding the waves of change on the leaderSHIP.
